THE Victorian Inter-colonial Exhibition b 1875, judging from the accounts in the journals kindly forwarded us by the Colonial Government at the request of the Exhibition Commissioners, seems to have been very successfully inaugurated. The exhibitors were much more numerous than on any previous occasion, and the whole affair was on a far more extensive scale than has been previously attempted. The Japanese Court was evidently a conspicuous and attractive feature of this exhibition. Although there were only two exhibitors, the assertment of goods was so large and diversified as to constitute a very respectable exhibition, and the beautiful and novel articles displayed evoked the warmest admiration and praise. The contributions from Singapore were also regarded with great interest, and considerably enhanced the attractions of the exhibition. LOSS OF THE BRITISH SHIP

The following particulars of the loss of British vessel are translated by the Straits Times from the Batavia Handelsblad of the 28th and 29th ult. :-

teen men of the crew have been brought here who are directly interested. by the Government steamer Argus!

Respecting the stranding of the British thin Derwent we have recertained the following. further particulars .- During the night between the 19th and 20th instant, the said vessel, which was bound from Rio Janeiro to Anger for orders, became totally lost near Java Head, owing to a ourrent and a heavy South-west wind; and so chance of saving anything more than their sending of a British escort with a fresh expediown lives. Fifteen men, including the captain, repaired into one of the boats, and necessary. successfully, struggled through the surf escaping safe to land. Three others, at the moment that the storn of the ressel was sinking under them, went, to the fore part of the abip. to reach the above from thence, but had to give up their design because the rooks against which the ship was lying were too steep and too bigh. When day broke they were still olinging to that part of the ship that continued above water afterwards they succeeded in climbing up the rooks. The persons in the boat shaped a course for Java's first point, where they bud seen the houses which have been built for the lighthouse in course of constitution there. Having come Torin on Thursday. H. R. H. was to embark ashore; they were kindly received, attended to, at Brindisi on 16th instant, reach Athens on and fed. On the morning of their arrival, an expedition consisting of Europeans and natives was sent out to trace the still missing persons, but two days afterwards the searching party returned unsuccessful. A second expedition was more fortunate; these composing it found the three men, and brought them back to their. outta. comrades, where they were cared for as kindly as the others. On Monday morning, they will be all conveyed to Batavia in the steamship

Whether the person in question, who has absconded from his bail, is still at large or not I cannot say, still less if he is in this country. His object, it was T.A. generally understood, was to make Norway a morely subsidiary asylum, and only make use of the country as the means of making a rather is that he will, unless he has had a previous knowledge of Norway and some elight acquain-tauce with the language, find that he has reckoned without his host, and those whom SIL I have met who are of a sporting turn are inclined to lay odds on the detectives in purevit. OL If he is an "old hand," not at the ambiguous practices which have led to his exile, but if he has had any extended experience of Norway as a sporteman, which it is believed be has not the BE unfortunate gentleman in difficulties would not find it very difficult to baffle for a time, and finally to tire or starve out, say one anxious to see him safe home again. The last I heard of Burmah has unconditionally assented to the the individual in question was that he had pussed through Honefors, which, as all Norwegian travellers know, is such a obscubing place to spend a day two at, when bound to stay |-- 1 for any length of time at Christiania, or within reach of it. There ought to be no difficulty in scouring one whose personal appearance is so precisely advertised, and who, if the description of him be accurate, seems to be pussessed of more than one distinguishing characteristic to lead to his easy indentification. If the Norwegian police authorities are equal to the emorgency, presuming, of course, that they have been communicated with, and that they are thoroughly in earnest and on the qui vive.
